

1. A method for providing life insurance for simultaneous death of a multiple of insured parties, the method comprising:

obtaining information about each of the insured parties;

10 establishing eligibility of each the insured parties by comparing information received from each of the insured parties with predetermined standards;

certifying each of the insured parties is in good health by comparing information received with predetermined standards; and issuing a simultaneous multiple death life insurance plan.